It has been 2 weeks since Rin asked to take ownership of the shop.

Mmph!

On top of running the day-to-day operations of the shop, Rin has to pay the shop's monthly rent of 200,000 Yen to prove his mettle.

Rin has 2 more weeks to determine if he can seriously continue running the shop.

Thanks
a bunch!

For some reason, I'm volunteering
to help out
with the store.

I've
brought
the flour!

Hmm?

Was
that a customer
just now?

Thank
you for your pa-

From the beginning, I had wanted to distribute the flyers at the front gates of an all-girls high school, but the teacher came rushing over with rage once he saw me doing it.

And we did spend quite an amount to get the flyers printed too...

Yeah.

I guess it's not so effective to distribute flyers in this time and age.

We will put a stamp on their stamp cards whenever they purchase a cake from us. Once they have collected enough stamps, we give them a free cake as a present... or something like that.

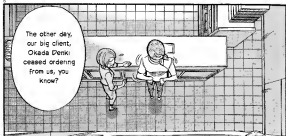

Would we expect more regular customers this way?

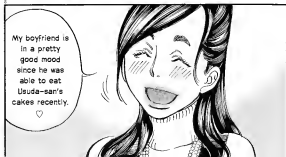

Shall we try using stamp cards?

Well, I have been thinking about this.

Well, there's no need to pay for printing here.

They're to be used for my family's shop.

Stamp cards?

So that's why you were so determined to come to university today...

I guess this formed the impression of what it would be like when I join the workforce...

Forever
...

Eh?

If that's
the case,
you will be better off
working forever at this shop.
